2nd meeting in Brussels, 29th of February and 1st of March 2016

The project partnership is elaborating the State of the Art report on "Consumer perceptions and practices of young digital natives". This survey was aiming at analyzing quantitative and qualitative aspects related to young people motivation and personal interests. The state of Art will permit TICS partners to have a clear overview of the situation in the partner's country and concrete answer from the users.

Another intellectual output is analyzing the use of information and communication technologies in the social-educational field. It is impossible to think of an area of scientific knowledge or any of our daily activities without being related to ICT. This large emerging design is present in almost everything we do, and the ICT used by public administration bodies, companies, families and individuals, is acting mutations in the way of societies' life, assuming importance in the collective and individual life. Also the organizations, the role of which is prevention or re-inclusion of young people, use the ICT in their activities as shown on our global report presenting the state of art in TICS project partner´s countries.

Best practice presentation!

Partners had the opportunity to discover the SAS (=School dropout service) supported by the Federation Wallonie-Bruwelles. This best practice was presented by Maurice CORNIL, director of Parentheses SAS.

SAS works with secondary school youth (13-16 years old) at risk (absenteeism, dropout, crisis). A personal project is designed in order to improve responsibility and autonomy. The main activities include workshops and outdoor activities. Natural activities and workshops help to reach "rescolarisation" and "re-socialisation".

SAS also supports beneficiaries' democratic participation ("parole libre" and "conseil").
